A few reasons why

pupils will not drop their classroom correctness at the door if they use as their textbook in composition

English in Service

1. Self-criticism of a constructive nature is brought about, and the principles of form (mechanics, grammar, rhetoric) are discovered and proved by the pupils.
2. Sufficient formal drills are provided to make even the slow pupils sure of these principles.
3. Abundant application of these principles is afforded the pupils under conditions so like those in life out of school, that the regular use of these principles is likely to become habitual.

English in Service

by W. W. HATFIELD and A. LAURA MCGREGOR is a new type of composition book for grades VII-IX. It will "sell" your pupils on grammar, rhetoric, and the mechanics of writing.

Fourteenth Summer Session

Middlebury - - - Vermont

Do you know the importance of the words you teach?

Is it more important to teach the words mean, soon, right, white than to teach the words bite, dart, crowd, frown?

Should the words cup, angel, scorn, brick be taught before the words great, live, order, come?

What 500 words would you include in a basic list in teaching English to foreigners?

Are the words used in some textbooks so difficult that children cannot comprehend the subject matter?

To extend your spelling lists, where would you find the RIGHT words?

THE TEACHER'S WORD BOOK

By EDWARD L. THORNDIKE

answers these and many other questions of importance to elementary- and high-school teachers and to students of educational measurement.

The TEACHER'S WORD BOOK comprises the 10,000 most used words in the English language. It is based on a count of over 4,000,000 words found in 41 different sources. The words are alphabetically arranged. Each word is followed by a key number—simple to use—which shows its place in importance in the list of 10,000.

The TEACHER'S WORD BOOK is decidedly one of the most important contributions to modern educational literature.

PUBLIC SPEAKING

By CLARENCE STRATTON

Director of English, Cleveland Schools

This high school textbook departs from the traditional. It is not an "elocution" book. Committing to memory and then reciting is not the basis of the pupil's work. Effective self-expression is the main objective in the course. The principles of composition receive attention as well as the art of declamation.

Here are the chapter headings: I Speech, II The Voice, III Words and Sentences, IV Beginning the Speech, V Concluding the Speech, VI Getting Material, VII Planning the Speech, VIII Making the Outline or Brief, IX Explaining, X Proving and Persuading, XI Refuting, XII Debating, XIII Speaking upon Special Occasions, XIV Dramatics.

Producing in Little Theatres

With over 60 illustrations and annotated list of 200 plays. "For teachers who take on dramatics as an extra duty, it is invaluable."—The Drama.

PRACTICAL ENGLISH COMPOSITION
In Four Books for Secondary School Use

By EDWIN L. MILLER

Principal of the Northern High School, Detroit, Michigan. Member of the National Joint Committee of the Reorganization of English in Secondary Schools

"Attractive in appearance, compactly phrased, full of humor, never getting far away from good literature, giving specific, interesting problems and sensible directions for solving them, these books emphasize all the legitimate attractions of the subject, and omit senseless formalities."—The Nation.

The division of the composition work in the Miller plan gives the pupil each year a fresh presentation of the subject which is not possible in the one-volume text.

Announcing "The Victrola in Correlation with English and American Literature"

A new practical help in the teaching of English

FREE

to all teachers of English and other interested persons

This booklet lists over 350 matchless Victor Records, with descriptive notes, giving

- Musical settings to some of the world's greatest poetry.
- Scenes from Shakespeare by world-famed interpreters.
- Recitations and readings from Dickens,
Poe, Holmes, Kipling, Riley, Mark Twain, Field, Dunbar, etc.
- Musical settings to lyrics from "The Lady of the Lake," "Comus,"
"L'Allegro," "Il Pensieroso," etc.
- Suggested musical correlations in mood and atmosphere for literary masterpieces.

—Chronological table of parallel music, literature, art, and world events.

The Victrola, as an element of interest, should enlist the cooperation of all the teachers in the school. It has a great field of service in the English class room. Music and poetry are inter-allied arts, the one enhancing the appreciation and enjoyment of the other.

The use of Victor Records at the proper time in a recitation, does much to vitalize the lesson, and lifts a seemingly dry subject from the black-and-white of the printed page into the realm of human interest.

Do not forget that this intensely interesting and very helpful booklet is yours for the asking.

BUSINESS ENGLISH PROJECTS

is a practice book by W. WILBUR HATFIELD. It was originally designed for commercial courses, but it also proves satisfactory for use in other courses. It interests pupils

because its occasions for speaking and writing are so human and untechnical. It teaches the essentials of mechanics, grammar and rhetoric by clear, simple statements introduced when the pupils need them.
